Famed broadcaster-Senator to lead Sir John A. walking tour of Kingston Saturday!

Kingston: Senator Mike Duffy is the latest distinguished Canadian to lead the Sir John A. Macdonald Bicentennial Commission's series of John A.-themed walking tours of Kingston's downtown.

Senator Duffy, familiar to millions of Canadians from his decades of service as a leading broadcast journalist on CTV and CBC Radio and Television, will be leading the free walking tour starting at 2 pm on Saturday October 29. His tour will leave from the Kingston Visitor's Centre in front of City Hall on Ontario Street. All are welcome.

"Because of the generous support of Manulife Financial, the Sir John A. Macdonald Bicentennial Commission is able to offer this unique tour, led by Senator Duffy, for no charge," said Macdonald Bicentennial Commissioner Arthur Milnes. "In leading the tour Saturday afternoon, Senator Duffy, a respected journalist and now Senator, will have joined scholar and political strategist Tom Axworthy, former Canadian Ambassador to the US Derek Burney, Minister of Finance Jim Flaherty, Senator Linda Frum, Ontario cabinet Minister John Gerretsen, Kingston Mayor Mark Gerretsen, Macdonald biographer Richard Gwyn, Professor Emeritus John Meisel, Steve Paikin of TV Ontario, and former Ontario Premier Bob Rae in leading the tour to support Macdonald Bicentennial activities."

As space is limited, those interested in attending should register at arthur.milnes@sympatico.ca as soon as possible. While tickets are free, donations to the non-partisan, non-profit Macdonald Bicentennial Commission are welcome.

For further information contact Arthur Milnes at (613) 328-5592.
